This workshop is exclusively dedicated to the use of Frontier Technologies in the smart sustainable cities context. Technologies which have the potential to displace the existing city services and people living style and have the potential to completely disrupt how cities operate their municipal services and interact with their citizens. Frontier technologies are crucial enablers in the process of building a smart sustainable city and they allow governments to shift the mainstream paradigm of city operations, in order to achieve more efficient and better performing systems. The new social media tools can also drastically change the way how citizens and governments communicate and interact with each other.

The goal of this workshop is to analyze how these technologies can be implemented and used for the benefit of the citizens and the city itself in an efficient manner. In this sense, this workshop is unique because it comprises the applicability of technologies from the point of view of the user and the technical implementation issues faced by the cities. Following this format, the workshop will be able to reunite in the same place stakeholders from different spheres: industry, academia, government, and practitioners.
